

Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction wins David Crombie Award

For Immediate Release: May 21, 2009

Toronto, Ontario – The community of Hamilton took on one of the most complex challenges facing every Canadian community – poverty – and working collaboratively with its citizens and hundreds of local organizations, it has started to turn things around, attracting the admiration of cities across the country and winning the Canadian Urban Institute's (CUI) 2009 David Crombie Award.

"Named after one of Ontario's most loved leaders, the annual David Crombie Award goes to those people or initiatives that work collaboratively on solutions for complex problems that face Canada's largest urban region – the Greater Golden Horseshoe. By tackling poverty and making a difference the Hamilton Roundtable on Poverty Reduction has taught us all a lesson that is respected far beyond the Golden Horseshoe," said CUI President and CEO Glen Murray.

"Where most communities only see poverty increasing, Hamilton has made Herculean efforts in not just slowing poverty but reducing it by almost two percent in less than a decade," said Murray.

About 500 elite members of Canada's who's who of city building will gather in Toronto on June 5 at the Royal York Hotel to honour The Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction (<http://www.hamiltonpoverty.ca/>) as well as 17 other groups and individuals (www.canurb.com/awards/ula/leadershipawards2009.php) across the country who are making Canadian cities exciting and dynamic places to live and work.

In 2001, Hamilton had one of the highest rates of poverty in Ontario with 20 per cent of residents living below the Low Income Cut Off (LICO) and one in four children under age 14 were growing up in those households. A roundtable was convened by the City of Hamilton and Hamilton Community Foundation to address the issue and it attracted business, government leaders, not-for-profit sector, educators, people living in poverty, neighbourhood activities, philanthropists and other local leaders to take up the challenge to make "Hamilton the best place to raise a child."

"What is unique about the Hamilton Roundtable is that we have engaged representation from all sectors of the community including people who live with poverty," said Mark Chamberlain, Chair of the Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction and President and CEO of Trivaris. "Working collaboratively with other organizations is only part of the solution. We have taken a creative approach and have engaged more than 900 partners in this challenge. It is through these unique partnerships, that the Roundtable has built individual solutions at the community level, while focusing on changing the policies and systems at the higher level which keep children and their families living in poverty."

"As the David Crombie award recognizes the work done in a collaborative and innovative fashion for solutions to complex problems in large urban regions, I commend the selection committee on awarding the Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction for this year's award," said Mayor Fred Eisenberger. "People may not realize that poverty and prosperity are linked. By focusing on poverty reduction we are focusing on improving the prosperity for the whole community," he added. "If individuals cannot contribute because of poverty keeping them down, what we are losing is human potential which is vital for success. The Hamilton Roundtable for Poverty Reduction constantly works to ensure our community has stable human capital, human dignity and overall community well being. Our City vision also supports this principle as we strive to be the best place in Canada to raise a child, promote innovation, engage citizens and provide diverse economic opportunities."
